

there may be either of an Infants being put upon Committing a Mischief of this kind, or of any Person Conspiring Madnes for that very purpose; and where so General and publick a mischief is to be prevented, no Loophole for escaping ought to be admitted. Besides that to one truly Distressed death is not so great an Evil, as his suffering may be good to others by way of terror and Example. By the King we are not to Glad or Glad a Nomine or titular King, as the lieffand of a Lodon Regnant for a particular Maternal found necessary to make compensation or Imagining the death of King Philip during his Marriage with Queen Mary of England to be high treason. Hale Hist. cap. 1. How are we to Understand his by King? ^{Hale Hist. cap. 1} Not that it Disaproves, but only the Sovereignty wheretover it is in question; because the King in Peoplion being the only Person in the Actual possession of the Crown and Kingdom, he is not to judge. Because the King in Peoplion being the only Person who has a right to that abomination called the only Person who has a right to that abomination called the King which he may set up against the King in Peoplion he who Administers those Laws and fines by Virtue thereof he accrues to us our Lands Liberties and possessions, and all other Advantages of Government, & may justly claim Returns of duty Allegiance and Subjection, whence they are bound to defend him in his Reas against every power whatsoever. One out of possession, i.e. far from having any Right to our Allegiance by Virtue of any other title which he may set up against the King in Peoplion that we are are bound by the Duty of our Allegiance to the first King. H. 7. cap. 1. The Rightful Sovereign cannot by out of possession grant a pardon; and when the Sovereign shalles punishe i.e. for committed against the Subjects or Sovereign do facts. Pow. 1. cap. 1. Edw. 4 cap. 1. 2. Cap. 3. 3. Cap. 7. Hale p. Br. 12. ^{first. plowd. cor. i. 1. p. 60. & 10. i. 11. 12.} Hantons p. 1. Cap. lib. 1. cap. 17. for fit to legg. For since there is no tribunal but that of Heaven to which Persons can apply for Recencion of their titlles, when that somē so far to have Declared favour of one as to give him quiet possession of the throne, the Publick peace which is the End of all Government, requires a Dutifull submission to him. and it is the highest Madnes to give up that safe and security which we Enjoy from a neareable protection; in Exchange for that Disorder, Mortality and Bloodshed which cannot but be expected from an Attempt to wroght the sceptre out of the hands of the Prince Regnant. For as the Duke of Lancastre ^{say} shamed himself offer upon the 8. of Oct. before 3. in june 1453. he is more concerned in having their sedition and rebellion in preferring one King before another or in Distraining the Rights of the Two Robber and he had been Doctor for the poor people of England, that some third branch had obtained the Crown from them both, and possessed it quickly, than to be lost in sedition by such a Civil war, as was Camall. Lord without Honour. Sir George Merton (Crown, part 1. fol. 6. 95) thinke, that the opposition may never have laid a foundation to the Crown and Parliament were conspiring for the Crown of Scotland, it had not alienated from him self of Scotland, he tooe himselfe whole title is to say, as that in King Charles the second had in his Empire had in Sir Henry Vans cap. 14 Part 2 it was his to say, that all those who acted Against and kept King Charles but the second out of opposition in Reference to the power then in being, were traitors. H. 4. cap. 14. 15 & 16. Fol. 2 cap. 3. 15. But let the title of one out of opposition be never so clear and plausible, it must be securitie onal foundation from some positive law, which when it cannot lacke effect without involving a Nation in Discord and confusion, the avoiding whereof will be very end of all Law; it must give way to the publick Profit of the State, and be suspended till the Execution of fit be Conscient and with the hearty of the people for whose sake it was so said. As to Sir Henry Vans cap. 1. it is to be remembred that King Charles thereon it was first published, that King Charles the second was, King both do facts and he rose from his fall his death; and it is apparent that no other person was in possession of any Sovereign power known to mankind, Robert abd. fact. 1. 18. The Earl mount being extremely determined by the battle of King Charles the last who called it at that
